Trademarks Bill

THE TRADEMARKS BILL, 2008.

MEMORANDUM.

★ 07 JUN 2008

ACC. No: .....

CALL NO: .....

1. Policy and principles

The Bill seeks to repeal and replace the existing Trade Marks Act (Cap 217) which has been found to be inadequate and to incorporate new developments in trade marks law and to consolidate into one piece the statute law on trade marks thus making the trade marks law comprehensive and easily accessible.

2. Defects in the existing law

Trademarks are defined as any sign or combination of signs capable of distinguishing goods or services of one undertaking from those of another.

The current law on trademarks in Uganda is the Trademarks Act, Cap. 217, which is based on the United Kingdom Act and which commenced on 1st January, 1953. Due to the passage of time, some aspects of the trademarks law have become outdated, especially in light of the present day policies, international obligations, globalization and technological developments. The Trademarks Act has however not been reformed despite reforms in the original laws from which it is derived. As currently written, the Trademarks Act impedes investment as a result of the inadequate protection that investors are given in case of infringement of their trademarks. There is therefore, the need for radical changes in the law to bring it in line with the current global changes.

3. Large sums of money are invested in devising trademarks to suit a particular product or service and to appeal to a particular market. More large sums go on promoting trademarks or brands through advertising. If protection of trademarks is not adequately provided for by law, this means that the rightful owner may lose business and goodwill. The effects on the economy may become manifested in few or no new trademarks being created, and the government will definitely loose out on revenue it would have otherwise got from registration of new trademarks. In law, however, trademarks have in recent years been the subject of increasing controversy. This has culminated in the need to reform the trademark law in Uganda.

4. Remedies proposed to deal with defects in existing law

The reform of the trademarks law is geared towards having modern laws supporting a competitive economy in a coherent and accessible form, while providing maximum freedom for participants to perform their proper functions at the same time recognizing the case for high standards and ensuring appropriate protection for all parties. It is further geared towards poverty eradication and promotion of Government policies such as Poverty Alleviation Action Plan (PEAP). These reforms are also geared towards bringing Uganda's legislation in line with her international obligations.

Trademarks today are a vital component of the whole structure of advertising and marketing and are as such a strong feature of the commercial scene. Logos, catchphrases and images all fall within the ambit of the trademark and form a valuable part of the goodwill of the business with which they are associated.

5. The changes required to bring the existing law up to international standards and to make it user friendly requires a new Bill that totally overhauls the existing Trademarks Act, Cap.217.

6. The main guiding principle considered in the reform is to develop a trademarks and service marks law designed to protect consumers from being confused or deceived in the market place, enable investors to market and sell their products using trademarks as signs of quality, and develop a law that will boost consumer confidence in a product that they have come to trust from their knowledge of the product and its trademark.

7. Provisions of the Bill

The Bill comprises nine Parts. It seeks to repeal and replace the existing Trademarks Act, Cap.217 and deals with trademarks protection as described in the following paragraphs—

(1) Definition of trademark

The Bill widens the scope of trade marks under the proposed law by defining the expression "trade marks" in clause 1 to cover the protection of both goods and services. Thus the definition reads as follows—

"trademark" means, a sign or mark or combination of signs or marks capable of being represented graphically and capable of distinguishing goods or services of one undertaking from those of another undertaking.

(2) Registration of trademarks

The Bill provides for the registration of trade marks upon application and the payment of prescribed fees. Under clause 7 of the Bill a trade mark is required to be registered, in respect of particular goods or classes of goods or particular services or classes of services and questions arising as to the class with which goods or services fall shall be determined by the registrar. The Bill provides for two categories of registration of trade marks namely, Part A and Part B and provides separate particulars or attributes qualifying goods and services for registration in each category. (See clauses 8 and 9) The Bill also provides for registration in Part A of the register of certification trademarks under clause 13.

(3) Registration under Part A (clause 8 of the Trademarks Bill)

For a trademark to be registered under Part A of the register, the mark has to be distinctive that is to say, the trademark must be unique in nature which uniqueness is capable of distinguishing the goods and services in respect of which the trademark is registered from goods or services of which no connection subsists.

(4) Qualification for registration under Part A

The trademark under Part A shall contain or consist of at least one of the following—

- (a) name of a company, individual or firm represented in a special or particular manner;
- (b) signature of the applicant for registration or of same predecessor in his or her business;
- (c) an inverted word or inverted words;
- (d) a word or words having no direct reference to the character or quality of the goods or services as the case may be, and not being accordingly to its ordinary signification a geographical name or a surname.

(5) Rights given by registration under Part A

Clause 30 deals with the rights given by registration of goods in Part A and their infringement and Clause 31 deals with the rights given by registration of services in Part A and their infringement.

(6) Registration under Part B (clause 9 of the Trademarks Bill)

For a trademark to be registered under Part B of the register, the mark should be capable of distinguishing goods or services in respect of which the mark is registered from the goods or services in the case where no connection subsists.

(7) Rights given by regulation under Part B

Clause 32 deals with the rights given by registration of goods in Part B and their infringement and Clause 33 deals with the rights given by registration of services in Part B and their infringement.

(8) Difference between registration under Part A and B

The difference between registration under Part A and registration under Part B is that under Part A the trademark must be distinctive that is to say, it must be unique but under Part B the trademark only has to be different from another trademark generally. This may be in terms of shape or colour. It only has to be capable of being distinguished from other trademarks.

(9) Certification mark (clause 12 of the Trademarks Bill)

A certification mark is a mark adopted in relation to any goods in respect of origin, material, mode of manufacture, quality, accuracy or other characteristics. A certification mark is registrable under Part A of the register in respect of those goods in the name of that person as owner.

(10) Difference between certification mark and trade mark

A certification mark is different from a trademark. A trademark is defined as a sign or mark or combination of signs or marks capable of being represented graphically and capable of distinguishing goods or services of one undertaking from those of another undertaking.

(11) A certification mark applies only in relation to goods and not services and it is registrable only under Part A because of its distinctiveness in relation to—

- (a) origin;
- (b) mode of manufacture;
- (c) quality;
- (d) accuracy;
- (e) material or other characteristics.

(12) There are instances where a trademark and a certification mark are registered under Part A of the register in respect of the same goods that is to say the trademark may be distinctive and may also have a certification mark in relation to its origin, mode of manufacture, quality or material.

(13) Appeal

A person aggrieved by the decision of the registrar in considering an application is entitled to appeal against the decision to the High Court. (See clause 6)

(14) Length of protection of registration

According to clause 16 of the Bill the initial registration of a trade mark is to last for seven years but the registration may be renewed for ten years at a time.

(15) Effect of registration and action for infringement

Part IV of the Bill prescribes the effect of registration of trademarks and action for infringement.

The Bill in clause 45 and 46 accords priority rights in respect of trade marks registered in the countries of origin of particular goods and services on the basis of reciprocity i.e. that those countries of origin accord the same protection to goods and services originating from Uganda.

(16) Remedies

According to the Bill the remedies available to the owner of a trade mark against an infringement of the trade mark are as follows—

- (a) injunction – clause 83(1);
- (b) prohibition on import of goods bearing infringing trade mark;
- (c) prohibition on export of goods bearing infringing trade mark;
- (d) damages or rendering account of profit – clause 83 (General provision);
- (e) cancellation of invalid trade marks registration – see clause 46, removal of trade mark from registration on proof of prior registration;

(f) costs – clause 61, power of registrar to award costs in all proceedings if the registrar considers not reasonable.

(17) Records

For the purpose of keeping proper records and to prevent fraud, clauses 2 and 25 provide for keeping on the register of all registered trade marks and particulars of the owners, registered users, notification of assessments and transmission, disclaimers, conditions, limitations and other matters relating to registered trade marks as may be prescribed by regulations made by the Minister.

(18) Electronic register

Since the Bill does not specifically prohibit the use of an electronic register it means the registrar may under clause 2 maintain an electronic register whether as an alternative or complementary to a traditional register.

(19) Security for costs for persons not resident in East Africa

Clause 69 of the Bill requires persons not resident in East Africa to provide security for costs where they give notice of objection to an application for registration under clause 11 or whenever they apply to the registrar under clause 46 for a trade mark to be removed from the register otherwise their applications will be dismissed.

(20) Merging of offences under penal code

The Bill thus incorporates the current provisions of Part XXVII of the Penal Code Act (Cap. 120) relating to trademarks infringement offences.

(21) New offences

In order to protect trade marks the following new offences have been introduced in the Bill—

New offences and penalties to deal with—

- (i) falsifying a registered trade mark provided for under clause 78 of the Bill;

(ii) falsely applying a registered trade mark – clause 79 of Bill;

(iii) manufacture and possession of things used for commission of an offence. (See clause 80, manufacture of dye, block, machine or instrument used in commission of offence).

- (a) the same services;
- (b) the same description of services; or
- (c) services or descriptions of services which are associated with each other, nearly resembling each other or identical to each other, if having regard to the similarity of the services or the association of the services or descriptions of services, the use of the trademarks in exercise of those rights would be likely to deceive or cause confusion.

(5) Where a trademark is assigned or transmitted under subsection (4), the assignment or transmission shall not be taken to be invalid under this section if the exclusive rights subsisting as a result in the persons concerned respectively are, having regard to limitations imposed on them, such as not to be exercisable by two or more of those persons in relation to services for use in Uganda in relation to services for use in the same country, territory or place outside Uganda or in relation to services available for acceptance in Uganda.

(6) The owner of a registered trademark who proposes to assign it in respect of any of the services in respect of which it is registered may submit to the registrar in the prescribed manner, a statement of case setting out the circumstances and the registrar may issue to him or her a certificate stating whether, having regard to the similarity of the services or the association of the services and goods or descriptions of services and goods and to the similarity of the trademarks referred to in that case, the proposed assignment of the trademark would or would not be invalid under subsection (4).
